David Cady, 76, old age pensioner and lifelong resident of the South Bloomfield community, was killed instantly at 6:40 p. m. Wednesday when he was struck by a coal truck as he attempted to cross Route 23 in the village.

The truck ran over Mr. Cady. His head was crushed and his chest, neck, arms and legs were broken, deputy sheriffs said. A verdict of accidental death was returned by Coroner C. E. Bowers.

Deputy Sheriff Robert Adkins said he was told that Mr. Cady stood on the east side of the highway and waited for a car driven by Walter Cummins, Ashville, to pass. Mr. Cummins was going northward.

After the Cummins car passed Mr. Cady stepped into the highway in front of a truck driven by James Woodruff Vaughn, 22, of Jackson Route 4, going southward. The truck is owned by Edward Zinn, also of Jackson Route 4. The owner and his son, Edward, Jr., were riding in the truck.

Returning to Homes The men had made a trip to Delaware with a load of coal and were returning to their homes when the accident happened.

Deputy Adkins said the left front of the truck struck Cady knocking him down, then the wheels crushed him. Deputies Adkins and Robert Armstrong investigated the accident. The truck driver was not detained.

The body was removed to the A. J. Hott Funeral Home in Commercial Point. Mr. Cady is survived by one brother, Robert of Columbus, and a half brother, William Bye of South Bloomfield, with whom he resided. Five nephews and three nieces survive. He was born in South Bloomfield, April 8, 1863.

CHIEF OF BUND GOES ON TRIAL

Kuhn's Fight To Prevent Hearing Of Embezzling Charge Fails

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Fighting every step of the way with the legal weapons of a well-prepared defense, Fritz Kuhn, chief of the German-American Bund, reluctantly went on trial in state court today charged with larceny from his own organization.

A crowded lobby in the old criminal courts building silently inspected the Bund chief when he arrived with counsel but attendance in the courtroom was limited to newspapermen and prospective jurors.

Kuhn wore a dark grey shirt, grey soft hat and light brown topcoat.

APARTMENT FIRE FORCES 100 OUT; SEVEN RESCUED

CLEVELAND, Nov. 9.—Seven persons were rescued by firemen and nearly 100 more were forced to flee to the street today when a three-alarm fire swept through a four-story apartment building at Carnegie avenue and East 55th Street, Cleveland, today.

In addition to the seven taken from the building by firemen, a 10-month-old baby girl, Marice Ann Schoenberg, was rescued by Don Goodwin, another resident of the building, who smashed the door of the Schoenberg apartment to reach the child. The girl's parents were absent.

The fire, discovered shortly before midnight, crept up through walls until they burst through the roof in less than half an hour. The blaze was under control by 1:30 a. m. Fire Chief James E. Granger said.

Damage was estimated at $10,000, and an investigation as to the cause of the blaze was scheduled for later today. At the height of the fire traffic was blocked completely on Carnegie Avenue, one of the main arteries between the east side and downtown.

Effort to Kill Hitler One of Futile Series

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE Several attempts on the life of Adolf Hitler have been made since the historic Munich beer hall putsch of November 8, 1923.

It was in that putsch he came closest to death and oddly enough it was on the 16th anniversary celebration of his first abortive attempt to seize control of Germany that the latest assassination attempt occurred.

Actual number of these "removal" efforts by anti-Hitlerites is known only to the gestapo. All assassination plots thus far have come to naught.

Hitler missed death by inches in the beer hall putsch when 16 of his followers were killed by Reichswehr forces, and Hitler escaped by falling flat on his face. In 1927 the gestapo learned of the existence in Prague and Denmark of two secret murder societies whose members were sworn to kill Hitler.

It was reported, but never confirmed, that an attempt was made on Hitler's life two years ago at the funeral services for the first wife of Air Marshal Goering, at Schorfheide, a forest near Berlin. A sniper was reported to have fired from a distance of about 400 feet, missing Hitler and wounding an adjutant.

In December, 1935, more than 120 persons said to have plotted the assassination of Nazi leaders were rounded up. These were reportedly led by Franz Nirsbach, former writer and ultra-rightist. Six Czechs were arrested at Wilhelmshaven last April, accused of plotting to murder Hitler. The Fuehrer, speaking at the launching of the battleship Admiral Von Tirpitz, was shielded by bullet-proof glass.

W. FOREST WOODMANSEE MAYOR AT GREENFIELD

W. Forest Woodmansee, son of W. B. Woodmansee of Williamsport, assistant manager of the American Hotel, was elected mayor of Greenfield in Tuesday's election.

Mr. Woodmansee was elected by a margin of 695 votes, over Bennett Shimp, the largest ever given a candidate for the office. Mr. Woodmansee is a former councillor and at present is a member of the Greenfield Cemetery Board. He is a Republican.

Drive Through Belgium Or Holland Thought At Hand; Peace Talk Discussed

PARIS, Nov. 9.—Leading to belief that a major German offensive is imminent on the northeastern sector of the Franco-German front, German troops unleashed a series of heavy raids against advance French positions today.

Five raids were carried out, each preceded by heavy artillery barrages.

It was learned that one of the German sorties was undertaken by an entire regiment instead of a mere company, and this fact was produced as evidence of an anticipated offensive.

French authorities predicted the expected German drive would serve as a cover for a German invasion of Holland, Belgium or both.

The French government launched immediate preparations to meet a possible German thrust through the low countries.

Possibilities of such a development were thoroughly canvassed, it was reported, during a discussion between French Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs Auguste Champetier de Ribes and Belgian Ambassador Paul Le Tellier.

Peace Appeal Talked The diplomats also discussed the peace appeal issued by King Leopold of the Belgians and Queen Wilhelmina of Holland with special reference to the situation leading up to the sudden conference.

NAZI SABOTAGE PLOT UNCOVERED IN SOUTH AFRICA

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Discovery of a Nazi plot to sabotage the industry of South Africa and stage a subversive movement against the government itself was announced in an authoritative broadcast from Cape Town today.

The South African government has unearthed "incontrovertible evidence," the broadcast said, of a plot to arm blackshirt troops and wreck vital points of African industry.

The government is in possession of authentic lists of members of the subversive movement, and links have been found with the German minister's staff.

Agents of the subversive organization operated in the principal cities of the union, the broadcast said, but the plot itself was frustrated by outbreak of war.

BYRD MAY CHANGE PLANS FOR HIS SNOW CRUISER

BOSTON, Nov. 9.—Anxious to get to his South Polar base at Little America before Antarctic bad weather sets in, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd today was considering a plan to load his 40-ton snow cruiser aboard ship at Philadelphia instead of Boston.

The cruiser is now stalled in upper New York state on its oft-interrupted eastward trip from Chicago.

Shifting the objective from Boston to Philadelphia would save several days. Admiral Byrd's flagship, the North Star, is now almost completely loaded with supplies and will be ready to start Saturday or Sunday. The North Star will stop at Philadelphia to pick up an airplane.

LONDON—Germany reportedly has asked Holland for permission to establish military air bases and take control of the Port of Flushing, a Brussels dispatch to the London Daily Express said today, adding that the request was refused.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Sweden has ordered 80 war planes from the Republic Aviation Corporation of Farmingdale, N. Y., it was learned today. The company announced it has a $10,000,000 backlog of orders for military planes which will keep production at its current level into 1941.

Following the parade Legionnaires will enjoy a rabbit supper. Veterans of the Spanish-American War will be their guests. The VFW plans a rabbit supper November 16.

Adolf's Luck Holds As Speech In Beer Garden Is Ended Less Than Quarter Of Hour Before Terrific Blast

EIGHT NAZI "OLD VETERANS" KILLED

Berlin Says Plot Was Meant To Wipe Out Reichsleader And Many High Officials In Germany

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—The time-bomb which wrecked the Buergerbraukeller in Munich, shrine of the Nazi party revolution, was designed not only to assassinate Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler but to wipe out the entire ruling hierarchy of the Third Reich, it was stated in high authority today.

All of the prominent Nazi leaders who a few moments before had heard Hitler threaten five years of merciless war on England escaped by a bare twelve minutes when "one blinding flash and then a stunning concussion" reduced the famous beer hall to a shambles.

Great Britain was held directly responsible by the German press and officialdom for the outrage which cost the lives of eight "old veterans of the party" and injured some 60 others.

As the original reward of 500,000 marks ($200,000) for information leading to arrest of the perpetrators was increased to 600,000 marks by popular subscription, authoritative quarters said that Heinrich Himmler's gestapo was "on the trail of those responsible."

The accusation of British guilt was based directly on Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's assertion that he hoped to live until Hitler and Nazism in the Reich have been destroyed.

"England will learn how to keep our loyalty to our dead," Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff declared.

"November 8 was the last signal," Nachtausgabe said: "Now the Germans will answer."

Hitler, Goering in Search Hitler and Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering personally directed the search for the would-be assassins, whose apprehension "dead or alive" has been ordered. They carefully scrutinized scores of pictures of the wrecked beer hall, flown to Berlin from Munich, in the hope of discovering some telling evidence.

The explosion occurred at 9:21 last night. Hitler and his aides had left the building only twelve minutes previously. The rush of war work compelled him to abandon his usual practice of sitting around in the Buergerbraukeller and talking to his old comrades on the night of November 8 each year, and likewise spared him from death or injury.

(Editor's note: Direct word from Berlin that no prominent Nazis were killed disposed of a Reuters report from Paris that Rudolf Hess, deputy Nazi party leader, was "among the victims" of the explosion.)

On Hitler's return to Berlin, he was met at the Anhalter railway station by Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, who was prevented by pressing duties from attending the Munich celebration.

Advisers Closed The Fuehrer immediately summoned a conference of his closest advisers at the chancellery, including Goering, Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Gen.

Blast Plot Nazi-Made, French Say

Explosion Arranged To Stir Up Germans, Paris Hints

PARIS, Nov. 9.—French newspapers expressed skepticism regarding the bomb explosion at the Munich beer cellar last night and German charges that it represented an unsuccessful attempt to "assassinate" Chancellor Hitler.

Many papers took the attitude that the bomb explosion was a "plot" by the German gestapo (secret police) to "inflame the German public."

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—The good fortune that has attended Chancellor Hitler's meteoric career appeared today to have played its part in saving him from death or injury in the Munich bomb explosion last night.

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—If a time bomb was responsible for the blast that wrecked the Buergerbrau beer hall in Munich last night, it must have been ticking ominously while Chancellor Hitler, in his speech attacking Britain, uttered words that today assumed a character of uncanny prophecy. Stir Up Germans,
Paris Hints

PARIS, Nov. 9.—French newspapers expressed skepticism regarding the bomb explosion at the Munich beer cellar last night and German charges that it represented an unsuccessful attempt to "assassinate" Chancellor Hitler.

Many papers took the attitude that the bomb explosion was a "plot" by the German gestapo (secret police) to "inflame the German public."

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—The good fortune that has attended Chancellor Hitler's meteoric career appeared today to have played its part in saving him from death or injury in the Munich bomb explosion last night.

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—If a time bomb was responsible for the blast that wrecked the Buergerbrau beer hall in Munich last night, it must have been ticking ominously while Chancellor Hitler, in his speech attacking Britain, uttered words that today assumed a character of uncanny prophecy.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

One of the most novel methods yet employed for introducing a screen character was devised by Director Tay Garnett for presenting Loretta Young, feminine star of Walter Wanger's "Eternally Yours," the new comedy romance which will have its premiere showing at the Cliftona Theatre on Sunday. Miss Young plays the role of wife and assistant to "the Great Arturo," a master magician, in the new film and as the theatrical sequence of the picture opens David Niven, the magician, is engaged in "creating a woman."

EX-CONVICT HELD ON CHARGES OF ARMED ROBBERY

John W. Richards, 28, London-derry Route 1, convicted of auto theft in Circleville in 1931 and sentenced to five years in the Mansfield Reformatory, is under arrest in Chillicothe in connection with the robbery of a Chillicothe cab driver last Saturday night.

John Richards was named by Orville Cooper, 27, Chillicothe, as the gunman in a holdup near Jones Crossroad. Charles Richards, 22, a brother, was not identified by Cooper but the cab driver told Police Chief Russell Poole he believed Charles was at the wheel of an auto in which his assailant made an escape. Cooper was robbed of $8. Charles has been identified in a Wellston cab driver hold-up, officers said.

John and Charles Richards were arrested at their home Monday by state patrolmen for investigation on theft of a license plate. The license was used on a car involved in a failure to pay for gasoline at Tuscon on Thursday. Three other men were held for questioning when they inquired at the police station about the Richards brothers.

An auto used by the Richards brothers was a stolen car, officers said, and in it they found a radio stolen from the auto of Parker Cook, Ashville Route 1. The radio was stolen in Chillicothe on October 20.

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

THE HONOR OF THE NATION

In the discussion of the neutrality bill there has been a remarkable degree of tolerance. Millions have participated in this debate, and so far without the report of a single bloody nose. All this is something of a rebuke to "tired liberals" as well as tireless radicals. Our free institutions have shown an unexpected vitality.

One point, however, appears to have been little touched upon. It is the honor of the nation and the American people. In this particular, the argument has run an ignoble course.

As the debate proceeded it has become crystal clear that proponents of repeal really wanted to help England and France. And that, in turn, is predicated upon the belief that their victory would protect the United States. Senator Austin of Vermont, Senator Burke of Nebraska, Miss Dorothy Thompson and others have made this as plain as Mussolini's lower jaw.

It has been argued that if Hitler wins, we PETTENGILL are next, that the British fleet must be kept afloat in British hands; that our "first line of defense" is on the Rhine, or in France or somewhere "over there."

Now this is an arguable thesis which does not discredit the intelligence or patriotism of those who hold it. I personally think it is not our war. Nevertheless, men are not morons who hold that England and France, in fighting their battle are also fighting our own. The premise is that Germany is our foe, as well as theirs.

But from this premise what is the conclusion? It is that we should lift the embargo, sell bombing planes, poison gas, and every instrument of death by which the enemies of England and France (our enemies) may be put to death and charge our brave allies a profit for fighting for us!

I submit that this is a craven excuse upon which to predicate the action of a great nation.

We were called Shylocks once without cause or excuse. That was after we had sent more men to France than did England, and after we had paid for that sacrifice with our own money and our own men. But if we are called Shylocks now we shall deserve it! We are going to charge soldiers a profit for the guns with which to protect us!

We are to "play safe." We are going to hide behind the skirts of French and English mothers as they send their sons up against the Seigfried line—for us. We are going to get all their gold—C.O.D.! And when our allies have paid us all their gold, and their situation is then more desperate than now, we are going to rub our unctuous hand and say to them, "no gold—no goods. We sell only for cash. We fight only for profits." Or will we?

Such is "more than words and less than war." To me it is wholly ignoble and rotten. If this is our war, even a fourth or a tenth part of it, we should pay for our part in money, in ships and in men.

But if it is not our war—as I believe it is not—then we can with honor either lift the embargo or retain it.

But the thesis that it is our war puts us in the position of hiring Hessians to fight our battle, or as in the Civil War, paying someone to take our place in the draft—no, not hiring or paying them to fight, but charging them a profit to fight!

Such a spirit did not decorate the white snows of Valley Forge with the red badge of courage.

To their eternal credit Senators who opposed lifting the embargo such as Borah and Clark of Missouri said that if this were our war they would vote to declare America's participation in it with all that implies. But no Senator who voted to lift the embargo, had the nerve to say this. They pretend to believe that England and France are fighting our

The Federal Circuit Court in Cincinnati Wednesday reversed an order of District Judge Mell G. Underwood, Columbus, assessing Boyd Rife, Columbus, and Howard Rife, Walnut Township, executors of the estate of M. J. Rife, Walnut Township, one half of a storage charge of $1,425 covering lumber belonging to Rife but claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy of the Hart-Spencer Company, Logan.

Judge Underwood held both Rife and the trustee were liable for the charge. The lumber was stored by S. S. Ruble, Logan, trustee, pending determination to whom it belonged. The contention of Mr. Rife that he was not liable for half of the charge was upheld by the court.

ACTIVITIES OF TRACK OWNER BEING TRACED

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—The almost impossible task of tracing every movement made by Edward J. O'Hare during his last hour of life faced authorities today as they searched for clues to the brazen gangster-style slaying of the famous sportsman.

O'Hare, wealthy president of Sportsman's Park race track in suburban Cicero, was killed yesterday afternoon as his car sped along Ogden Avenue, a usually heavily traveled thoroughfare. He was struck at least six times in the jaw, cheek and head by two shotgun volleys and was dead when the first person reached his side. A .32 calibre revolver, which had not been fired, was on the seat next to the body.

The killers escaped. Several persons told police they had seen three cars close to O'Hare's coupe. No one was able to say, however, how many persons were in the other cars, nor just how the assassination was carried out. One man told detectives he thought he had seen a man leap from O'Hare's machine just before the shooting, but because of the great confusion he could not be sure of it.

Investigators said they believed O'Hare had been slain following an argument, and that the killers had acted in sudden rage. It was this fact that gave importance to O'Hare's movements in his final hour.

PARIS BELIEVES BIG OFFENSIVE CAMPAIGN NEAR

Five Attacks Noted After Heavy Artillery Barrage On Western Front

ence between the two monarchs at the Hague.

(Editor's note: Yesterday, informed quarters in Paris charged that the Dutch-Belgian peace plea was the result of "more German blackmail" and that it was issued under a threat of German violation of Dutch and Belgian neutrality.)

While the French awaited some definite sign of Germany's immediate plans, fighting on the Western Front increased in intensity, as announced in this morning's communique.

The statement said the entire front was more active during the night and that local reconnaissances and sharp encounters occurred, especially between the Saar and Moselle rivers.

Two Courses Possible

In the French view, Chancellor Hitler will decide on one of these courses:

1—An offensive against France's northeastern frontier or an invasion of Holland and Belgium—or both.

2—Withdrawal of the German forces to winter quarters and a German propaganda barrage until conditions become more favorable for fighting next spring.

The British and French governments remained in close consultation as they prepared parallel replies to the Wilhelm-Leopold peace appeal, but some French quarters said they believed Germany might move against the low countries this week end.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The Munich beer hall explosion drew scathing comment from authoritative British quarters today.

Remarks regarding the blast ranged over a wide field of speculation. One source observed:

"The gentleman who presumably engineered the Reichstag fire probably knew how to engineer last night's affair."

Another theory was expressed in these words:

"The explosion was engineered by persons who wished to rid themselves of Hitler because of the privation to which he has subjected Germany."

MUCH energy and initiative, with things moving into creative lines under high tempo, are read from favorable astral influences. It is probable that new matters will engage the attention, despite certain impeding or delaying elements, possibly a depressed mental state or a physical handicap. Employers, superiors and important organizations, diplomatic, political or fraternal bodies, may be sought for active support. It is a time for working toward high goals of accomplishment.

Those whose birthday it is may find their energies and spirit of initiative under high pressure for launching new projects of importance in spite of moments of physical depression or morbid mental slants. Or timid elders may offer opposition. But superiors, employers or those in political, fraternal or other influential places may abet constructive plans. Generally auspicious conditions await aggressive action.

HITLER MISSES DEATH AS BOMB WRECKS HALL

Wilhelm Kietel, chief of staff, Propaganda Minister Goebbels and a number of other key men.

At noon Hitler received the Italian ambassador.

The leaders apparently avoided the explosion because they left for the Munich railway station ahead of the original schedule after Hitler made the shortest speech yet given in one of the annual beer hall celebrations.

The explosion took place at 9:21 p. m.—the exact moment that the train carrying the Fuehrer back to Berlin left the Munich station.

Authorities revealed that the high Nazi officials who accompanied him to the celebration—Rudolf Hess, Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels, Labor Front Leader Robert Ley, Nazi Party Cultural Supervisor Alfred Rosenberg and Secret Police Chief Heinrich Himmler—were not injured.

The explosion wrecked the ceiling of the famous beer hall and today the spot was covered with a heap of debris nine feet high due to collapse of a central column which caused the entire roof to cave in.

Reward Mounting

While authorities launched an immediate rigorous investigation that was expected to extend throughout the Reich and result in perhaps hundreds of arrests, authorities announced a reward of 500,000 marks (about $200,000) for information leading to seizure of the perpetrators.

By noon, this sum had been increased by another 100,000 marks through private contributions.

The known dead included the cashier of the beer cellar, Frau Henle, a radio technician named Weber, two storm troopers named Luck and Kaiser and two other unidentified persons, as well as a clerk named Leonhard Reindl and Eugen Schachts, a radio announcer.

A member of the orchestra which played at the beer cellar, Herr Kassberger, was reported dying.

Investigation of the explosion was concentrated on discovering whether the bomb that caused the blast was placed above the central roof of the beer hall or inside the hall.

In any case, authorities indicated, it would have wiped out not only Hitler but his entire entourage had they been in the cellar when the bomb exploded.

Bomb Put In Tree?

Some Munich police subscribed to the theory that the time bomb had been placed in a tree hanging over the roof of the beer cellar.

This idea was predicated on the fact that the blast tore a huge hole in the roof.

Part of the wreckage was cleared away during the night by soldiers attached to an army engineers corps and the preliminary investigation was placed in the hands of the army.

Carthy sketched the history of the claimed larcenies which total $14,500.

The first half hour of Kuhn's attendance in the courtroom was given over to defense motions for the postponement of the trial or change of venue, all of them denied.

McCarthy, addressing the prospective jurors, read a list of names of persons, he said, might be called on to testify in the case or whose names might be mentioned.

The list included the names of Congressman Martin Dies, Gustav Elmer, national director of the Bund; Albert Osborn, handwriting expert, and Virginia Cogswell of California.

Kuhn's counsel objected to naming anyone but witnesses, but was overruled.

During the reading of the list, Kuhn cocked his head occasionally as a name apparently caught his interest but for the most part appeared slightly bored.

The list was long and contained such names as those of Gen. Van Horn Moseley, U. S. A. retired; Count Vonsiatky, White Russian leader; Knights of the White Camelia; Silver Shirts and other organizations identified with vigilante movements of one kind or another.

Judge Wallace told one taleman:

"Remember, this man is not on trial for any political views he may have. No political views are on trial here."

Five Attacks Noted After Heavy Artillery Barrage On Western Front

ence between the two monarchs at the Hague.

(Editor's note: Yesterday, informed quarters in Paris charged that the Dutch-Belgian peace plea was the result of "more German blackmail" and that it was issued under a threat of German violation of Dutch and Belgian neutrality.)

While the French awaited some definite sign of Germany's immediate plans, fighting on the Western Front increased in intensity, as announced in this morning's communique.

The statement said the entire front was more active during the night and that local reconnaissances and sharp encounters occurred, especially between the Saar and Moselle rivers.

Two Courses Possible

In the French view, Chancellor Hitler will decide on one of these courses:

1—An offensive against France's northeastern frontier or an invasion of Holland and Belgium—or both.

2—Withdrawal of the German forces to winter quarters and a German propaganda barrage until conditions become more favorable for fighting next spring.

The British and French governments remained in close consultation as they prepared parallel replies to the Wilhelm-Leopold peace appeal, but some French quarters said they believed Germany might move against the low countries this week end.

Wheeler, Thomas, Johnson, Members Of Peace Unit, Take Major Role

HOLLAND, BELGIUM EYED

All Neutrals Should Urge End Of Strife Across Sea, Leader Says

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—A renewed appeal to President Roosevelt to initiate negotiations for an armistice in the European war was voiced by leading senators today following the Dutch-Belgian offer of mediation.

The peace group, which includes Senators Wheeler (D) Montana, Thomas (D) Utah, and Johnson (D) Colorado, were of the opinion that presidential support of the Dutch-Belgian proposals might lead to actual negotiations.

Their proposal followed closely on the heels of statements by Senator Borah (R) Idaho, and other leaders in foreign affairs, to the effect that the United States should do all in its power to bring peace to Europe.

All the senators, regardless of political party, expressed the hope that the President will take advantage of every valid opportunity to put this nation on record in support of any proposals that might lead to an end of the war.

Should Approve Action
"Certainly the President should enthusiastically approve the bold and commendable action of little Belgium and Holland, thereby leading the full weight of our prestige and power to their proposal," Johnson said.

"I think this is an opportune time for all the neutrals of the world, including the United States, to act in unison in demanding that the belligerents state specifically their war aims and offer to the belligerents their good services in promoting understanding," he added.

Wheeler criticized expressions to the effect that the United States should withhold possible action until other developments occur in the foreign situation.

"Any time is a good time to try and stop war," he said. "I think the American people are 100 percent behind any attempt the President might make to bring about peace."

Thomas saw little immediate prospect of an armistice, but added that any action taken by this country at this time might be of benefit in the future.

Signs Observed

"There will not be any immediate action," he added, "but the Belgian-Dutch proposals are a sign that peace is in the air, and if we make expressions for peace

McNUTT FOR VICE PRESIDENT

A month later, July 18, one of the newsmen quoted a syndicated column which said that Roosevelt would run for another term with Paul McNutt running for Vice President. Asked for comment, Roosevelt chided: "Would it be fair to label that a newspaper story?"

Ten days later, July 28, ingenious newspapermen thought up a new scheme to smoke out the President. "Can you say," queried one of the conspirators, "when the country can expect a statement from you on the third term?" To which Roosevelt feigned surprise, chuckled and said "No."

The best third term question asked of Roosevelt came from Fred Perkins of The Pittsburgh Press, who on August 1 uttered this pretentious statement:

"Mr. President, would you care to say a few fitting words regarding the important occasion which will have its 12th anniversary tomorrow?"

Here newsmen Perkins paused dramatically, then continued, "I refer to the occasion when Calvin Coolidge made his statement, 'I do not choose to run'."

The entire crowd laughed, in at this time it might do some good in the future."

Senator Murray (D) Montana said:

"I'm sure the American people feel that he should use his good office to act for peace at the earliest opportunity."

cluding the President, who could think of nothing better at the moment than to ask if this meant he was being invited to spend his summer at the Black Hills.

Most recent effort to smoke out Roosevelt on the third term came from Jim Wright of The Buffalo News, who recited this parody: "He's riding high and he's riding straight, 'He's riding for the White House gate.'"

To which Wright added: "In which direction, Mr. President?" Even this, however, did not get a rise out of Roosevelt.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

The New York Stock Exchange and the SEC are quietly working out a compromise on the latter's demand that brokers set up "customer banks" to safeguard funds deposited with them by clients. . . . Ballyhoo for Puerto Rican independence finds no favor with sturdy Santiago Iglesias, Resident Commissioner of the island. He declares: "Ninety-five percent of our people do not want to cut drift from the U. S."

It is estimated 70,000,000 Canadian ducks have flown into the United States with the approach of winter. That settles the problem of what we're going to have for that second Thanksgiving Day dinner.

IOWA QUIETLY CONFIDENT AS IRISH AFFRAY NEARS

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 9.—A quiet confidence pervaded the practice field today as Iowa's amazing Hawkeyes went through windup drills for the Notre Dame game here Saturday. Amongst local grid fans, the impression has been growing steadily that the Hawks have an upset ready for the unbeaten Irish. Light workouts and perhaps another look at Notre Dame plays was the practice schedule for the Hawks for the balance of the week.

MARKED BALLOTS BRING ROSS COUNTY PUZZLE

CHILLICOTHE, Nov. 9.—Ross County authorities today investigated the finding of a number of marked ballots during the dismantling of a precinct election booth. IOWA QUIETLY CONFIDENT AS IRISH AFFRAY NEARS

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 9.—A quiet confidence pervaded the practice field today as Iowa's amazing Hawkeyes went through windup drills for the Notre Dame game here Saturday. Amongst local grid fans, the impression has been growing steadily that the Hawks have an upset ready for the unbeaten Irish. Light workouts and perhaps another look at Notre Dame plays was the practice schedule for the Hawks for the balance of the week.

MARKED BALLOTS BRING ROSS COUNTY PUZZLE

CHILLICOTHE, Nov. 9.—Ross County authorities today investigated the finding of a number of marked ballots during the dismantling of a precinct election booth. Board of election members speculated on whether the ballots might change the result of the city auditor race, as unofficial returns gave Ira M. Korst a margin of only 13 votes.

WILL THERE BE REAL WAR?

THE Germans are getting bored by the war and the general European situation, an American correspondent reports. "Even our Fuehrer is terribly bored," a prominent Nazi says.

"What's the matter?" they ask. "Is it a war or isn't it? Why doesn't somebody start something?"

Certainly to American observers it seems a very strange war, which grows more and more inexplicable as the weeks pass without much action on either side or on any military front.

Behind and beneath all that apparent apathy there must be much activity. On the side of the democratic allies, at least, there is a constantly increasing tempo of preparation, a speeding up of armament production, the manufacture of airplanes and warships and munitions, and so on, and lately preparations for a flood of military imports from America.

On the German side, it is believed, preparedness reached its height some time ago. Just how the Nazis are using their time now is not explained. Many outside observers suspect that Hitler's moves are mainly political. General doubt spreads, as to whether there will be any real warfare on a big scale this winter.

And if the war can be postponed until next spring, will it develop at all? May not the big issues be settled, after all, by diplomacy rather than warfare?

ANTIDOTES TO PROPAGANDA

SOME of the current anxiety about propaganda in this country seems to imply that nothing can be done about it. We can't escape it. We must either shut it out entirely—which is impossible—or succumb to it.

That is nonsense. Propaganda can be studied, analyzed, questioned and counteracted by people who keep their heads instead of letting their emotions run away with them. There is no need to fear propaganda as if it were a plague. It is better to listen to it and then give it careful scrutiny and thought.

Here are a few corrective questions to apply to propaganda. What is its source? Who advances any specific bit of propaganda? What is the motive in doing so? What will be the effect of its widespread acceptance or disapproval? How can the truth be found, and how does it compare with the statements made? What may be said for the other side of the question?

In a democracy, we may be the masters of our own thinking.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN,

ROOSEVELT STILL AHEAD

WASHINGTON—For more than two years the Washington newspaper corps, supposed to possess some of the most resourceful brains in the nation, has been trying to get an answer to the big political question-mark of the nation:—"Will Roosevelt run for a third term?"

All sorts of questions have been fired at the President, and he has given all sorts of dodges in return. It has become a game. Newsmen now get together in advance of press conferences to devise new and more artful ways of getting an answer, or at least trying to get an answer from the President.

First newspaperman to put the blunt query to Roosevelt was Robert Post of The New York Times in June, 1937. Post minced no words. "Mr. President," he said, "would you accept nomination for a third term?"

It was one of the few questions ever to get under Roosevelt's skin. "Go off in the corner and put on the dunce-cap," he shot back, hardly batting an eye.

THE DUNCE CLUB

The next few third term queries brought exactly the same answer, with the result that a group of Washington correspondents got together to form the "Dunce Club".

Discouraged, they did not try to draw the President out again until December 6, 1938, when one of them reminded Roosevelt of a pro-third term statement by Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania and asked the President whether he would accede to Guffey's wishes. This brought a good laugh from Roosevelt, but nothing more.

Six months later, the boys made another effort. This was in June, 1939, by which time Jack Garner had made it quite evident that he was going to run for President.

"That sounds as if it should be answered by Question No. 57," shot back the President. Nobody knew what that was unless he was referring to pickles.

Next question was fired at Roosevelt on June 13, just after Harold Ickes had written an article in Look Magazine proposing a third term. Cross-examined regarding this in a White House conference, the President maintained a stony silence. He said he had only read the headlines.

Some commentators, for want of better clues, seized on this particular answer as being milder than the dunce-cap reply, and proceeded to write "think pieces" representing Roosevelt as virtually back in the White House again.

This brought a stern warning from the President at the next press conference. Undue significance had been attached to his failure to rebuke the newspaperman who asked that question, he said, so now

An Illinois doctor says the reason why there are more fat women than fat men is that so many married women "don't do enough work to burn up their food." That'll burn 'em up.

That war will probably continue marking time until Hitler goes up to his mountain hide-out for a consultation with Wodin.

DIET AND HEALTH

When No Treatment Is Best Treatment

Usually the Case in Bed-Wetting

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

How can the habit of bed-wetting be broken?

This question recurs quite regularly in my correspondence. The habit of bed-wetting disturbs parents out of all proportion to its seriousness. Usually no treatment and no discussion of the problem is better than fussy treatment. All children grow out of the habit in time.

Proper training in the use of a vessel is, of course, assumed to have been practiced. If, in spite of this training, bed-wetting continues, it is advisable to try to find a local or general cause. The general health of the child should be examined and especially to see that there is no form of diabetes, and an examination should be made to see that there is no local irritation. Reduction in the amount of fluids, especially after the evening meal, is an obvious form of procedure.

Punishment should never be used. Suggestion is a good form of treatment.

Diets for Detecting Food Allergy

Can food allergy be detected by the use of diets?

People who have allergic manifestations in the skin, such as recurrent hives, or allergic manifestations in the nose, such as chronic hay fever, may not give a skin reaction to show which particular food is responsible. The use of so-called elimination diets has been used to attempt to detect the substance which causes the allergy. These diets are based on a knowledge of what are the commonest foods which cause allergy. Thus, there are egg-free, wheat-free and milk-free diets.

Four elimination diets which can be used in succession are as follows:

	Diet No. 1	Diet No. 2	Diet No. 3	Diet No. 4
Cereal	Rice	Corn	Rice	Milk alone
Bread	Rice biscuit	Taploca	Rye	for the test
Meat or fish	Lamb	Corn pone	Rye-ric	period; two
Vegetables	Lettuce	Bacon	Beef	to three
Fruits and Jams	Spinach	Chicken		quarts a day
and fruit drinks	Carrots	Artichokes
Miscellaneous ...	Lemon	Pineapple	Grapefruit
	Pears	Apricot	Pears
	Peaches	Prunes	Peaches
	Sugar	Sugar	Sugar
	Olive oil	Mazola oil	Wesson oil
	Salt	Salt	Salt
	Gelatin	Karo corn	Gelatin
	Syrup made	syrup	Sugar made from cane		from cane
	sugar fla-		sugar flavored with		vored with
	maple		maple
	Olives		(unstuffed)

The patient can carry this on for some time without danger of nutritional disorder or vitamin starvation. If while pursuing one diet the allergic symptoms appear, the conclusion is that some article in the diet is the cause of them. The patient then moves on to Diet No. 2, etc.

Shadow Over Hill House

By ELLIOTT FILLION
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

LANCY'S GAZE seemed to hold my eyes for hours, though I knew it really was only an instantaneous glance. I could hardly control myself enough to place the pencil point on the break in the sole. It wasn't necessary. The print had served its purpose.

I had found the fleeting odor of that awful night!

Not only had I found it, but I had recognized it for what it was. Spice from Old Herb Gardens, or some such thing, was the name its creator had bestowed upon it, and every store had carried it the Christmas before. Why I hadn't remembered it before, I couldn't imagine. And, also, why hadn't I smelled it on Alan before this late hour?

There are just two answers to those two questions. The first: Well, my memory definitely isn't so good as I have always thought it. And second: Alan is so tall that I hadn't been near enough to his hair to catch the faint scent which was barely distinguishable.

Lancy scarcely waited for Alan's negative shake of the head before he spoke crisply:

"Thank you. You have all been very patient. I want to ask you, Murray, some questions about Miss Newcomb. Will you come to the office with us, please? Miss Gordon, will you continue taking notes?"

The compression of Lancy's lips into a grim line and the sternness of his voice told me he knew what I had found. Poor Josie! Was she to suffer the agony of hearing Alan accused of murder?

But the detective's tact surmounted that difficulty. His: "You will excuse Mr. Murray for a few moments, Miss Peake," effectively prevented her from coming to the office, as I was sure had been her intention.

"I'll be with you in a moment," Lancy said, and turned aside to speak to Haines at the door, while the chief, Alan and I entered the office.

The chief's face was hard and determined. He motioned me to my place at the table and Alan into a chair alongside. His voice was gruff as he said:

"Captain Lancy is the one who wants to ask the questions. We'll wait for him."

It seemed to me that Alan should have suspected something, but his face was placid as ever, as he replied:

"Okay, chief. I'm glad to help if I can."

Chief Forrest gave him a sharp glance at that, but made no further remark until Lancy came in. They must have exchanged some sort of glance, for the chief grunted out: "Nothing," and subsided again into silence.

Lancy walked straight to his chair and laid a loosely wrapped parcel on the table. His eyes looked Alan up and down for the longest minute I ever lived through. Then he barked rather spoke.

"Murray, why didn't you admit that the footprint is yours?"

Alan bobbed up out of his chair and back into it again like an old-fashioned jack-in-the-box.

"It isn't mine!"

The astonishment depicted by both face and voice at Lancy's charge just had to be genuine. No one on hearing such an accusation could so counterfeited an emotion.

"And I suppose you'll say this shoe isn't yours, too?" Lancy made a lightning move. I failed to follow. The parcel was gone. On his hand, extended toward Alan, was a worn shoe.

Alan's face was a picture. He can't be very bright. I don't mean that he is simple, but certainly his mind doesn't work with the clarity and speed of—Neal's, for instance. He just sat there, his face getting whiter and more worried every instant. No one spoke. He had to break the silence.

"It looks like mine," he admitted. "Lancy rose from his chair, picking up the print which he had laid down with the parcel. He turned the shoe over and held the two before Alan.

"It IS mine, but—but—I didn't know it. Honest, I didn't." Truth

From the crumpled paper still on his desk, Lancy produced the other shoe.

and nothing but truth was expressed in the broken words. His eyes wildly appealed for understanding.

Lancy looked at him, critically, judiciously. Abruptly his body relaxed. His voice changed.

"All right, Murray," he said in a gentler tone. "Nobody's railroad-ing you into anything. Suppose you sit back and tell us exactly what happened before you ran into Miss Gordon. Or are you going to deny that, too?"

"No," Alan spoke soberly. "I ran into her right enough. I didn't know who she was, until tonight. I've not been in on your conferences before."

"That's right, you haven't. Go on."

"Perhaps I should have told you about that before, but as I didn't see anything, only heard voices and that awful scream, I just kept still. You know, at that time I wasn't supposed to be over here at all and—honestly, Captain Lancy, Chief Forrest, I didn't know that was my print."

It was impossible to look at him and do anything but believe his words. But how any man can be so dumb—He must be a great help to that publishing house.

I think I'd better correct that. I learned later, much later, that Alan's father was connected with the publishing house and had a great deal of money invested in it. When he died Mrs. Murray insisted upon Alan's following in his footsteps, though Alan's heart was rooted in cranberry bogs which lie below Hill House. After all, it takes all kinds of men to make up the world and do the world's work.

"All right, son, I believe you," Chief Forrest's voice was actually tender. "Go ahead and tell us the whole story."

Alan drew a long sigh of relief, leaned back and his words tumbled over each other getting out. I suppose that helped to prove his story. He didn't have to think what to say, as the cleverest of us do when we make up a lie, even if it's a white one.

"When I left Josie at the door—" "Wait a minute," interrupted the chief. He seemed to have forgotten that Lancy was to do the talking.

"Where were you all evening?" "I went down to the village a little after seven." Alan accepted the correction with his usual sunny good nature. "I got a hair cut and fooled around, talked about the bogs for a while. Then I came home. Mother was in an awful way. Miss Ivy had come over here to see Mrs. Peake and hadn't come back. Mother's very nervous."

Alan's half apologetic voice painted for me a picture of an excited, fluttery woman anticipating the worst from the people on the other side of the spit fence.

"What time was that?" inquired the chief. Lancy seemed well content to let him handle this interview.

"Exactly twenty-five minutes of ten. Mother said Miss Ivy'd been gone almost an hour, and she'd said she would only be gone a minute."

"All right. Go on."

"I came over here, talked with Miss Gordon and Josie, and went out again. I had an idea that Miss Ivy and Mrs. Peake might have met at the end of the spit fence."

"Why did you think that?" asked the chief.

Alan colored but did not hesitate. "That's where Josie and I used to meet," he confessed. "We used to meet there and walk up between the spit fence and the shrubbery. No one could see us, and we could look between the bushes and keep tab on everyone."

A wild idea came to me then. I listened with all my might. Maybe, when this interview was over, I'd have something to say.

Alan was going on: "I went between the bushes and walked down the grass walk until I heard voices. I listened. Neither of them was Miss Ivy's. By the sound, I judged, they were in the walk ahead of me. I didn't want to meet anyone, so I ducked between the bushes. Just then the dog began to bark. I didn't want to meet him if he were loose, for Josie had told me how savage he is to strangers. I stood there considering what I should do, whether I'd dare risk meeting the dog or go back and down the fence on our side."

"Then I heard that scream. It literally paralyzed me. I don't know how long I stood there waiting for something else to happen. Suddenly I saw a figure loom up out of the fog. I just turned and ran. I knew Josie was all right, for I'd just left her, and if there were any trouble I knew, under the circumstances, Josie'd prefer that I kept out of it. So I did."

"I bumped into somebody but I kept on going. Of course, later, when we heard about Mrs. Peake, I knew I must have heard her scream, and probably heard her quarreling with the one who killed her. But I didn't know anything. I didn't think what I've told you was of any value, so I just kept still."

Alan looked from Chief Forrest to Captain Lancy and back again. His story was plausible, though I didn't think it showed him in an enviable light. Still, given existing conditions, he may have done the wisest thing. What excuse could he give for being on Hill House grounds, if he were caught after the dog barked and the woman screamed? Naturally, he didn't think of such a thing as MURDER.

"What do you mean, quarreling?" demanded Lancy. It was the first time he had spoken since the chief took over.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles F. Stewart

"WHEN," says Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, "congress passed our present law, authorizing the state department to conclude reciprocal trading bargains with foreign countries, it was represented that these dickers would enable us to swap off our various surpluses for other stuff that we, in the United States, haven't enough of, or maybe not any. Now, how's the system working out in practice?"

The senator was referring especially to the scheme's application to agriculture. Minnesota being notably a farm state. He was referring super-especially to dairy products, since they're particularly conspicuous in his commonwealth's output. He also was dwelling with much emphasis upon our pending deal with Argentina. "Because," he said, "Argentina is almost exclusively an agricultural and pastoral realm, with crops and animals and dairy edibles practically identical with our own."

IMPORTED CATTLE

It isn't proposed to admit Argentine cattle. It's well established, though denied by the Argentinians, that they are diseased, and there's a sanitary embargo against them. But the "critters" are shipped in from Canada. They're redundant on this side of the border already, asserts Senator Shipstead.

"For two or three generations," he points out, "the American farmer has taken it for granted that the fertility of his land was eternal. He's beginning to find out that he was mistaken—that the fertility which he took out in the form of grain must be restored in the form of humus, phosphate, potassium and nitrates. The manure from his barns serves this purpose. Destroy or reduce the dairy industry and you destroy the fertility of our fields."

The senator seems a bit jealous of the development of Dixie's dairying. Government policy there, as well as in the northland, has been to take as many acres as possible out of cotton production, thereby stimulating milk and its by-products. He remarks that such costs are lower in the south than farther north, giving the southerners an advantage.

Not that he wants to discriminate internally, but he does draw the line on international competition.

He indorses Pan-American neighborliness, but only in reasonable moderation.

OVERSEAS PURCHASES

Moreover, he suggests, "We've revealed our embargo law.

"The Allies will want huge quantities of our war supplies."

"That speedily will boost prices of our manufactured goods. But the Allies already are pretty well stocked up with our farm and dairy junk. Consequently our manufacturers' and their employees' prices and wages will skyrocket, but agriculture's figures will stay stationary, for quite awhile anyway."

Of course, this will sting agriculture and dairying.

"Much," remarks Senator Shipstead, "has been made of the fact that the farm-mortgage debt has been reduced by $2,400,000,000. But how? It's been reduced by foreclosures on farm mortgages. When a farm mortgage is foreclosed and the farmer is taken from the land, the debt is wiped out. That's how farm-mortgage indebtedness has been reduced."

According to Senator Shipstead our number of independent farmers has been cut by about 30 per cent since the beginning of the last war. Today 30 per cent, who used to be independents, are tenants.

It's interesting.

"Doc" Shipstead, who used to be an ordinary dentist in Minneapolis is a foremost authority.

At this writing he's nearly an independent party in congress.

AMERICA'S UNBROKEN ARMISTICE

1918 1939

The armistice of November 11, 1918, has endured for the United States for twenty-one years, and it is the hope of every American that it shall remain unbroken.

This nation has no quarrel with any other nation. We have no entangling alliances. Nor are there in the world anywhere any baubles of power or conquest that we are tempted to buy with precious blood.

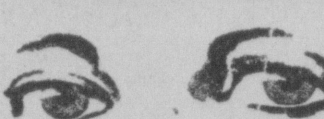

We give thanks for the armistice of 1918 and a thousand thanks more for the unbroken armistice of 1939.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round
BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN,
ROOSEVELT STILL AHEAD
WASHINGTON—For more than two years the Washington newspaper corps, supposed to possess some of the most resourceful brains in the nation, has been trying to get an answer to the big political question-mark of the nation:—"Will Roosevelt run for a third term?"
All sorts of questions have been fired at the President, and he has given all sorts of dodges in return. It has become a game. Newsmen now get together in advance of press conferences to devise new and more artful ways of getting an answer, or at least trying to get an answer from the President.
First newspaperman to put the blunt query to Roosevelt was Robert Post of The New York Times in June, 1937. Post minced no words. "Mr. President," he said, "would you accept nomination for a third term?"
It was one of the few questions ever to get under Roosevelt's skin. "Go off in the corner and put on the dunce-cap," he shot back, hardly batting an eye.

THE DUNCE CLUB
The next few third term queries brought exactly the same answer, with the result that a group of Washington correspondents got together to form the "Dunce Club."
Discouraged, they did not try to draw the President out again until December 6, 1938, when one of them reminded Roosevelt of a pro-third term statement by Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania and asked the President whether he would accede to Guffey's wishes. This brought a good laugh from Roosevelt, but nothing more.
Six months later, the boys made another effort. This was in June, 1939, by which time Jack Garner had made it quite evident that he was going to run for President.
"That sounds as if it should be answered by Question No. 57," shot back the President. Nobody knew what that was unless he was referring to pickles.
Next question was fired at Roosevelt on June 13, just after Harold Ickes had written an article in Look Magazine proposing a third term. Cross-examined regarding this in a White House conference, the President maintained a stony silence. He said he had only read the headlines.
Some commentators, for want of better clues, seized on this particular answer as being milder than the dunce-cap reply, and proceeded to write "think pieces" representing Roosevelt as virtually back in the White House again.
This brought a stern warning from the President at the next press conference. Undue significance had been attached to his failure to rebuke the newspaperman who asked that question, he said, so now

That war will probably continue marking time until Hitler goes up to his mountain hide-out for a consultation with Wodin.

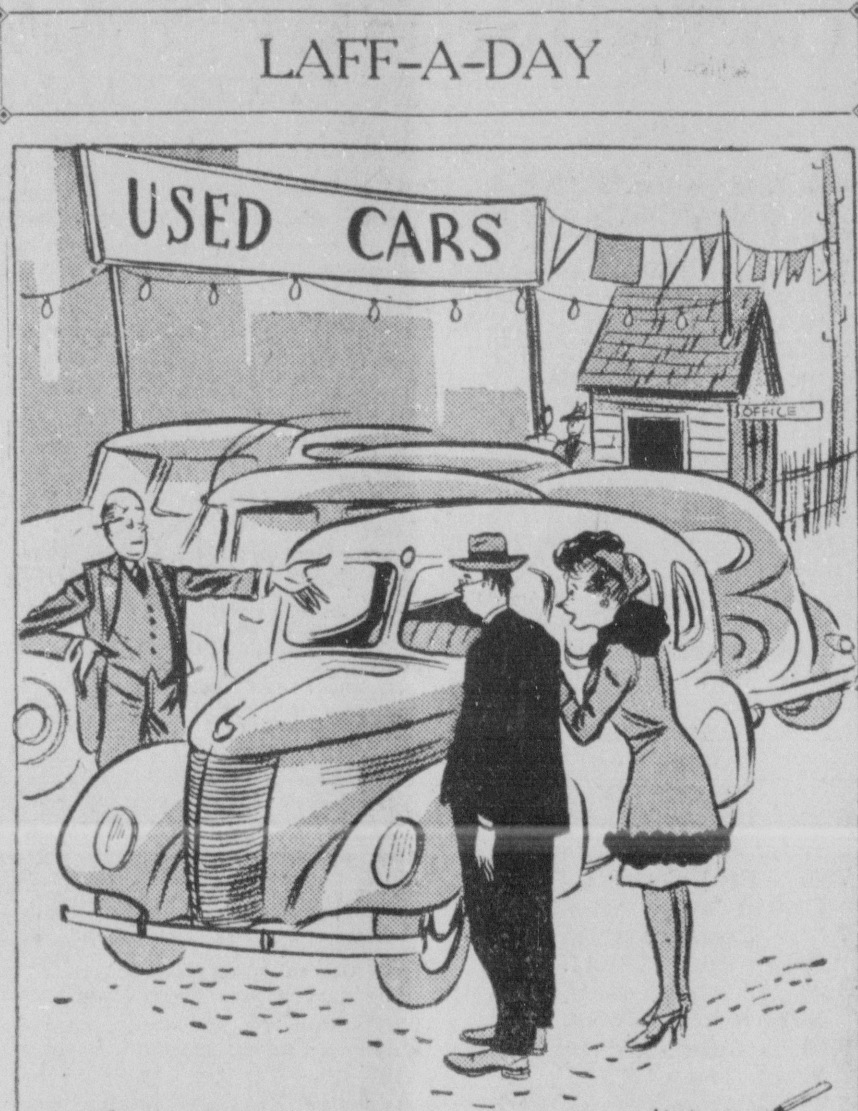

WILL THERE BE REAL WAR?
THE Germans are getting bored by the war and the general European situation, an American correspondent reports. "Even our Fuehrer is terribly bored," a prominent Nazi says.
"What's the matter?" they ask. "Is it a war or isn't it? Why doesn't somebody start something?"
Certainly to American observers it seems a very strange war, which grows more and more inexplicable as the weeks pass without much action on either side or on any military front.
Behind and beneath all that apparent apathy there must be much activity. On the side of the democratic allies, at least, there is a constantly increasing tempo of preparation, a speeding up of armament production, the manufacture of airplanes and warships and munitions, and so on, and lately preparations for a flood of military imports from America.
On the German side, it is believed, preparedness reached its height some time ago. Just how the Nazis are using their time now is not explained. Many outside observers suspect that Hitler's moves are mainly political. General doubt spreads, as to whether there will be any real warfare on a big scale this winter.
And if the war can be postponed until next spring, will it develop at all? May not the big issues be settled, after all, by diplomacy rather than warfare?

ANTIDOTES TO PROPAGANDA
SOME of the current anxiety about propaganda in this country seems to imply that nothing can be done about it. We can't escape it. We must either shut it out entirely—which is impossible—or succumb to it.
That is nonsense. Propaganda can be studied, analyzed, questioned and counteracted by people who keep their heads instead of letting their emotions run away with them. There is no need to fear propaganda as if it were a plague. It is better to listen to it and then give it careful scrutiny and thought.
Here are a few corrective questions to apply to propaganda. What is its source? Who advances any specific bit of propaganda? What is the motive in doing so? What will be the effect of its widespread acceptance or disapproval? How can the truth be found, and how does it compare with the statements made? What may be said for the other side of the question?
In a democracy, we may be the masters of our own thinking.

World At A Glance —By— Charles F. Stewart

"WHEN," says Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, "congress passed our present law, authorizing the state department to conclude reciprocal trading bargains with foreign countries, it was represented that these dickers would enable us to swap off our various surpluses for other stuff that we, in the United States, haven't enough of, or maybe not any. Now, how's the system working out in practice?"
The senator was referring especially to the scheme's application to agriculture, Minnesota being notably a farm state. He was referring super-especially to dairy products, since they're particularly conspicuous in his commonwealth's output. He also was dwelling with much emphasis upon our pending deal with Argentina.
"Because," he said, "Argentina is almost exclusively an agricultural and pastoral realm, with crops and animals and dairy edibles practically identical with our own."
IMPORTED CATTLE
It isn't proposed to admit Argentine cattle. It's well established, though denied by the Argentinians, that they are diseased, and there's a sanitary embargo against them. But the "critters" are shipped in from Canada. They're redundant on this side of the border already, asserts Senator Shipstead.
"For two or three generations," he points out, "the American farmer has taken it for granted that the fertility of his land was eternal. He's beginning to find out that he was mistaken—that the fertility which he took out in the form of grain must be restored in the form of humus, phosphate, potassium and nitrates. The manure from his barns serves this purpose. Destroy or reduce the dairy industry and you destroy the fertility of our fields."
The senator seems a bit jealous of the development of Dixie's dairying. Government policy there, as well as in the northland, has been to take as many acres as possible out of cotton production, thereby stimulating milk and its by-products. He remarks that such costs are lower in the south than farther north, giving the southerners an advantage.
Not that he wants to discriminate internally, but he does draw the line on international competition.
He indorses Pan-American neighborliness, but only in reasonable moderation.
OVERSEAS PURCHASES
Moreover, he suggests, "We've repealed our embargo law.
"The Allies will want huge quantities of our war supplies.
"That speedily will boost prices of our manufactured goods. But the Allies already are pretty well stocked up with our farm and dairy junk. Consequently our manufacturers' and their employees' prices and wages will skyrocket, but agriculture's figures will stay stationary, for quite awhile anyway."
Of course, this will sting agriculture and dairying.
"Much," remarks Senator Shipstead, "has been made of the fact that the farm-mortgage debt has been reduced by $2,400,000,000. But how? It's been reduced by foreclosures on farm mortgages. When a farm mortgage is foreclosed and the farmer is taken from the land, the debt is wiped out. That's how farm-mortgage indebtedness has been reduced."
According to Senator Shipstead our number of independent farmers has been cut by about 30 per cent since the beginning of the last war. Today 30 per cent, who used to be independents, are tenants.
It's interesting.
"Doc" Shipstead, who used to be an ordinary dentist in Minneapolis is a foremost authority.
At this writing he's nearly an independent party in congress.

DIET AND HEALTH
When No Treatment Is Best Treatment
Usually the Case in Bed-Wetting
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
How can the habit of bed-wetting be broken?
This question recurs quite regularly in my correspondence. The habit of bed-wetting disturbs parents out of all proportion to its seriousness. Usually no treatment and no discussion of the problem is better than fussy treatment. All children grow out of the habit in time.
Proper training in the use of a vessel is, of course, assumed to have been practiced. If, in spite of this training, bed-wetting continues, it is advisable to try to find a local or general cause. The general health of the child should be examined and especially to see that there is no form of diabetes, and an examination should be made to see that there is no local irritation. Reduction in the amount of fluids, especially after the evening meal, is an obvious form of procedure.
Punishment should never be used. Suggestion is a good form of treatment.

Diets for Detecting Food Allergy
Can food allergy be detected by the use of diets?
People who have allergic manifestations in the skin, such as recurrent hives, or allergic manifestations in the nose, such as chronic hay fever, may not give a skin reaction to show which particular food is responsible. The use of so-called elimination diets has been used to attempt to detect the substance which causes the allergy. These diets are based on a knowledge of what are the commonest foods which cause allergy. Thus, there are egg-free, wheat-free and milk-free diets.
Four elimination diets which can be used in succession are as follows:

Diet No. 1	Diet No. 2	Diet No. 3	Diet No. 4
Cereal Rice	Corn Tapioca	Rice Rye	Milk alone for the test period; two to three quarts a day
Bread Rice biscuit	Corn pone	Rye-rice
Meat or fish Lamb	Bacon Chicken	Beef
Vegetables Lettuce	Squash Asparagus	Tomatoes Beets
Fruits and Jams and fruit drinks	Pineapple Apricot	Grapefruit Pears
Miscellaneous ... Sugar	Sugar	Sugar
	Mazola oil	Wesson oil
	Salt	Gelatin
	Syrup made from cane sugar	Syrup made from cane sugar
	flavored with maple	flavored with maple
	Olives (unstuffed)

The patient can carry this on for some time without danger of nutritional disorder or vitamin starvation. If while pursuing one diet the allergic symptoms appear, the conclusion is that some article in the diet is the cause of them. The patient then moves on to Diet No. 2, etc.

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO
LANCY'S GAZE seemed to hold my eyes for hours, though I knew it really was only an instantaneous glance. I could hardly control myself enough to place the pencil point on the break in the sole. It wasn't necessary. The print had served its purpose.
I had found the fleeting odor of that awful night!
Not only had I found it, but I had recognized it for what it was. Spice from Old Herb Gardens, or some such thing, was the name its creator had bestowed upon it, and every store had carried it, and the Christmas before. Why I hadn't remembered it before, I couldn't imagine. And, also, why hadn't I smelled it on Alan before this late hour?
There are just two answers to those two questions. The first: Well, my memory definitely isn't so good as I have always thought it. And second: Alan is so tall that I hadn't been near enough to his hair to catch the faint scent which was barely distinguishable.
Lancy scarcely waited for Alan's negative shake of the head before he spoke crisply:
"Thank you. You have all been very patient. I want to ask you, Murray, some questions about Miss Newcomb. Will you come to the office with us, please? Miss Gordon, will you continue taking notes?"
The compression of Lancy's lips into a grim line and the sternness of his voice told me he knew what I had found. Poor Josie! Was she to suffer the agony of hearing Alan accused of murder?
But the detective's tacit surmised that difficulty. His:
"You will excuse Mr. Murray for a few moments, Miss Peake," effectually prevented her from coming to the office, as I was sure had been her intention.
"I'll be with you in a moment," Lancy said, and turned aside to speak to Haines at the door, while the chief, Alan and I entered the office.
The chief's face was hard and determined. He motioned me to my place at the table and Alan into a chair alongside. His voice was gruff as he said:
"Captain Lancy is the one who wants to ask the questions. We'll wait for him."
It seemed to me that Alan should have suspected something, but his face was placid as ever, as he replied:
"Okay, chief. I'm glad to help if I can."
Chief Forrest gave him a sharp glance at that, but made no further remark until Lancy came in. They must have exchanged some sort of glance, for the chief grunted but: "Nothing," and subsided again into silence.
Lancy walked straight to his chair and laid a loosely wrapped parcel on the table. His eyes looked Alan up and down for the longest minute I ever lived through. Then he barked rather than spoke.
"Murray, why didn't you admit that the footprint is yours?"
Alan bobbed up out of his chair and back into it again like an old-fashioned jack-in-the-box.
"It isn't mine."
The astonishment depicted by both face and voice at Lancy's charge just had to be genuine. No one on hearing such an accusation could so counterfeit an emotion.
"And I suppose you'll say this shoe isn't yours, too?" Lancy made a lightning move I failed to follow. The parcel was gone. On his hand, extended toward Alan, was a worn shoe.
Alan's face was a picture. He can't be very bright. I don't mean that he is simple, but certainly his mind doesn't work with the clarity and speed of—Neal's, for instance. He just sat there, his face getting whiter and more worried every instant. No one spoke. He had to break the silence.
"It looks like mine," he admitted.
Lancy rose from his chair, picking up the print which he had laid down with the parcel. He turned the shoe over and held the two before Alan.
"It IS mine, but—but—I didn't know it. Honest, I didn't." Truth

TIGERS PREPARE TO END SEASON ON INDIAN FIELD

Tiger gridders were engaging Thursday afternoon in their final practice session of the year, the one preceding the Hillsboro contest scheduled for Friday evening. Hillsboro's Indians will be met on the Highland County school's field at 8 o'clock.

The plans of Coach Roy Black took a kick in the neck at Wednesday's drill when Fullback Joe Staley suffered an ankle injury when he was tackled after a pass interception. The ankle is the same one that has kept the plunging sophomore on the sidelines during most of the season.

On the game will depend the Tiger standing in the league race. A victory will put the Red and Black in third place, while a defeat would put the team in a tie for the cellar with Hillsboro and Greenfield. The Indians have not won a game, losing in a surprise last week when McClain won its first victory.

The Tigers will make the trip to Hillsboro on a bus. With exception of Staley the remainder of the squad is in pretty good condition.

TIGERS PREPARE TO END SEASON ON INDIAN FIELD

Tiger gridgers were engaging Thursday afternoon in their final practice session of the year, the one preceding the Hillsboro contest scheduled for Friday evening. Hillsboro's Indians will be met on the Highland County school's field at 8 o'clock.

The plans of Coach Roy Black took a kick in the neck at Wednesday's drill when Fullback Joe Staley suffered an ankle injury when he was tackled after a pass interception. The ankle is the same one that has kept the plunging sophomore on the sidelines during most of the season.

On the game will depend the Tiger standing in the league race. A victory will put the Red and Black in third place, while a defeat would put the team in a tie for the cellar with Hillsboro and Greenfield. The Indians have not won a game, losing in a surprise last week when McClain won his first victory.

The Tigers will make the trip to Hillsboro on a bus. With exception of Staley the remainder of the squad is in pretty good condition.

Schmidt Expected To Try To Keep Score Down In Saturday Contest

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9—Ready for the slaughter, Ohio State University's Western Conference football squad prepared today for a trip to Chicago and a "battle" against the hapless Maroons.

The Bucks, entrenched in first place in the conference pennant grind, were overwhelming favorites to grab the game by a large score, although Coach Francis Schmidt was not out to set a scoring record.

There was little likelihood that the Bucks would duplicate or surpass the 85 to 0 score compiled by Michigan against the windy city lads. Once the game was safely stored away, Schmidt planned to send in second, third, and fourth string men in order to season them for next year or future games this season.

Sophomore backfield men like Dick Fisher, Jack Graf, Tom Kinade and John Hallabrin were slated for heavy duty in the event the first stringers push over three or four touchdowns early in the contest.

Look At Formation

Although the game appeared to be on the win side before it was even played, Schmidt, refusing to think of more than one tilt at a time, has drilled the Bucks this week against Chicago formations. On a dry field, the Maroons are reputed to possess a passing attack which might cause some trouble. Their power attack, however, is imaginary.

In five games this fall, Chicago won one. By some strange quirk of fate, the Maroons beat Wabash 12 to 2. Those 12 points, incidentally, represent the total number scored all season. The opposition, on the other hand, has accumulated 205 markers, literally wearing to a frazzle the Maroon linemen and backs.

In the windy city, the Scarlet and Gray men will be playing before the smallest crowd of the year. Not more than 5,000 or 6,000 fans were expected to turn out to watch something that shouldn't have to be contested in the first place because there is little to be a technical knockout in the second quarter.

Perry, Monroe Predicting Cage Team Rejuvenation

Two Pickaway County basketball teams that have been more or less behind the proverbial eight-ball because of lack of playing space are expected to begin revivals this year with new courts available for play. They are Perry Township, Atlanta, and Monroe Township, Five Points. Each school has erected a gymnasium that is now ready for use. Atlanta has been playing in a handbox and Monroe just hasn't had a basketball floor until this year.

Harry (Muscles) Townsend, new Atlanta coach who captained Wilmington College last year, has 14 boys out for practice, but two are not eligible until the second semester. They are Curtis Keller, a five foot 10 inch sophomore, and Gerald Frost, a six foot two inch sophomore weighing 170 pounds. Neither of the boys is experienced, but both are expected to be contenders when the first of the year arrives. Two other varsity squad boys are Neil Orndorff and George LeValley, both of whom are out of action because of illness. Orndorff is a member of the varsity quintet.

Other youngsters available are Glen George, Charles Gerhardt, Gerald Walker, Norman Mills, Rodney Dean, Paul Hooks, Weldon Walters, Benton Patterson and Junior Smith, George being the only senior in the group. Wayne High School of Clinton County, coached by a fraternity brother of Townsend, invades the Atlanta court Saturday night for an exhibition.

The remainder of the Atlanta schedule includes: November 17, at Jackson; November 21, at Monroe; December 1, Darby; December 8, at Scioto; December 15, Ohio Deaf; December 22, Deercreek; December 29, open; January 5, at Walnut; January 12, New Holland; January 19, Pickaway; January 26, at Madison Mills; February 9, at Ashville; February 16, Washington.

Coach Byron Stoer over at Five Points has Willis Conley, Paul Long, Paul Willis and Dale Smith, lettermen, returning for action, and in addition has added two boys from the Muhlenberg district. They are Lawrence Reid and Merle Neff, both members of the Darbyville varsity last winter.

Monroe's schedule includes: November 10, at Mt. Sterling; November 17, at New Holland; November 21, Perry; December 1, at Pickaway; December 8, Darby; December 15, open, (game wanted); December 22, Scioto; January 5, at Saltcreek; January 10, at Madison Mills; January 12, open; January 16, Mt. Sterling; January 19, Ashville; January 23, Madison Mills; January 26, at Deercreek; February 2, Washington; February 9, at Walnut; February 16, Jackson.

PACE FACES DOCHETY

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9 — World Bantamweight Champion George Pace, Cleveland negro, will meet Bobby Dochety, Toronto, Canada, boxer, in a 10-round melee Monday night in Columbus auditorium, it was announced today. In the over-the-weight bout Pace's fistful laurels will not be at stake. It will be his first start since his recognition by the N. B. A.

WOLVERINES AND GOPHERS TANGLE IN VITAL GAME

CHICAGO, Nov. 9—"Michigan isn't going to lose any more games this season."

"Minnesota isn't going to lose any more games this season." That's the feed box dope from the camps of the two schools as they prepared today for Saturday's annual battle for "the little brown jug" at Ann Arbor.

The Wolverines are still boiling over the loss to Illinois last week in which they say their hopes for a Big Ten and national championship go aglimmering. Minnesota isn't exactly pleased, either, to reflect on that defeat by Northwestern—a game that might just as easily have gone to the Gophers. The Northmen, too, are "enjoying" their worst season since Bernie Bierman took over the coaching reins, and defeat by any of their remaining three traditional foes would be almost too much to bear.

The result of this background is to make Saturday's game loom as one of the most bitter of the season, even though it is no longer the championship affair which spurred an advance sale of more than 50,000. As a matter of fact, even this incentive isn't needed. Michigan vs. Minnesota with the little brown jug at stake is one of the big ten traditions and has produced some of the conference's classic games.

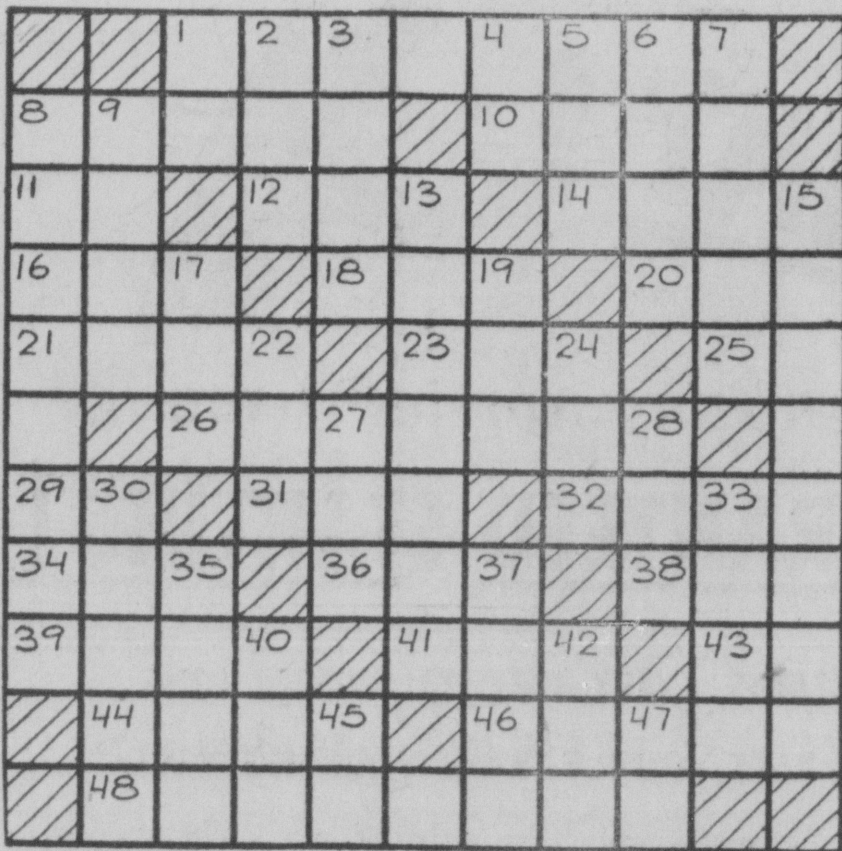

EIGHT QUINTETS TO PARTICIPATE IN CAGE LEAGUE

Eight teams will comprise the Circleville City Basketball league when it begins its operations Wednesday, November 29, in the Circleville Athletic Club gymnasium. A meeting was held Wednesday evening in the C.A.C. clubrooms with Johnny Heiskell, league president, in charge of the session.

He said that entries will include Glitt's Food Market, Charles Glitt manager; John Deere Tractors, Jay Warner manager; Eschelman Feeds, John Crawford manager; Purina Feeds, Ray Anderson manager; Walter Stout's Pure Oils, Dallas Williams manager; Wallace Bakery, L. N. Cupp, manager; Western Auto Supply, Gene Bach manager; Caskey Cleaners, Denney Boughner manager.

Sponsors of the teams will meet next Wednesday evening to discuss final details.

The Wolverines are still boiling over the loss to Illinois last week in which they say their hopes for a Big Ten and national championship go aglimmering. Minnesota isn't exactly pleased, either, to reflect on that defeat by Northwestern—a game that might just as easily have gone to the Gophers. The Northmen, too, are "enjoying" their worst season since Bernie Bierman took over the coaching reins, and defeat by any of their remaining three traditional foes would be almost too much to bear.

The result of this background is to make Saturday's game loom as one of the most bitter of the season, even though it is no longer the championship affair which spurred an advance sale of more than 50,000. As a matter of fact, even this incentive isn't needed. Michigan vs. Minnesota with the little brown jug at stake is one of the big ten traditions and has produced some of the conference's classic games.

TWO HUNTERS SHOT IN LEGS DURING FIRST AFTERNOON OF GAME SEASON

PEARL BOWMAN, JOHN LEMASTER GO TO HOSPITAL

Gunshot Wound Reported To Be Not Serious; Berger Dismisses Both

MANY SPORTSMEN ACTIVE

Five Others In Central Ohio Hurt In Mishaps When Seeking Game

Two men were treated in Berger Hospital Wednesday afternoon for shot wounds in their legs below the knees received in accidents on the first day of the rabbit and pheasant season. The season opened Wednesday at noon.

John Lemaster, 67, 653 East Mound Street, was treated by Dr. H. D. Jackson for wounds he suffered shortly after the season's opening. Mr. Lemaster was hunting in the Smith lowlands, just west of Circleville, he told Dr. Jackson. He was struck by some shot when another hunter fired at a rabbit. He was discharged from the hospital after treatment.

Pearl Bowman, 57, farmer, Stoutsville Route 1, was the other victim of a hunting accident. He told Dr. Jackson he was out on his farm to order away some hunters when a rabbit jumped out. In firing at the rabbit one of the hunters accidentally shot him.

Hospital attendants said Mr. Lemaster was treated about 12:15 and Mr. Bowman at 2:45 o'clock. Dr. Jackson said the men each had about eight shot wounds in their legs. The wounds are not serious.

Names of the men who were handling the guns were not learned.

Hundreds of Circleville and Pickaway countians were out Wednesday afternoon. Clarence Francis and Charles Carter, conservation officers, checked scores of hunters but no arrests were reported.

Mr. Francis said most of the hunters checked were having luck on rabbits but few had pheasants. Although there is a large crop of pheasants in the county this year the birds are in heavy cover and difficult to locate, the officer said.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9—Central Ohio today counted five first-day hunting casualties, including two men who were injured when their car was struck by a fire department inhalator squad.

Stray shotgun pellets may cause the loss of the left eyes of Bishop Neal, 38, of Columbus, who was struck while hunting near Worthington, and of Paul Tipton, 23, struck near Lancaster. Four-year-old John Butler, Jr., of Dayton, suffered buckshot wounds in the face when hunting with his father.

Harold LeFever, 20, and Linus Piercy, 19, both of Columbus, were injured when the car in which they were going hunting figured in a collision with an inhalator squad truck. They were not seriously hurt.

POSSES HUNT TWO WHO FLED BRANCH OF PRISON

NEW LEXINGTON, Nov. 9—A posse of seven Ohio Penitentiary guards scoured Perry County today in search of two convicts who walked away from the Junction City brick plant. They were William J. Davis, 38, serving a 10-to-25 year robbery term from Mahoning County, and Steve Cerne, 23, sent up from Cuyahoga for one to 10 years for operating a motor vehicle without the owners consent. The escaped pair was reported seen between Junction City and Somerset.

Most candidates who won in Tuesday's election had their hearing in the The Court yesterday with those who "didn't do so well" taking their defeat kindly. . . . The present members of the board of public affairs were reelected and will continue their good service for another two-year term. They are Grover Cline, Taylor Britlinger and O. W. Wills. Cecil Scott is Supt. of water works and has charge of the disposal plant. . . . It will soon be Squire Harry Sark and the same prefix hung onto Elmer Malone's name. They were elected to this position Tuesday by the "writing-in name plan" which usually does not work so well but succeeded this time. . . . Four new member faces will appear in the village official family at the first meeting in January. They are the mayor, Fred Hines, displacing his father-in-law, E. E. Fraunfelder, and Councilmen T. R. Acord, S. C. Allison and C. B. Morrison, displacing A. W. Graham, C. C. Cloud, L. B. Dailey. These incoming "new shads" are all a seasoned lot in public affairs in some capacity and are used to "taking it," good or bad. . . . Thomas Purcell will be the new member of the Harrison Township school board after the first of the new year and Russell Reid succeeds himself as the local township trustee. . . . James Hoover is to succeed Dan Boone as township clerk.

Ashville—The Ashville and Lockbourne Lutheran Brotherhood held their regular monthly meeting at the local church entertainment and dining room Tuesday evening with a program an banquet. The Grove City brotherhood was in attendance as guests. The next meeting will be held at Lockbourne.

Ashville—If our local, for many years bank secretary, E. A. Snyder, "holds on" until next Saturday the 11th, he will have lived an even 80 years. Expects to be with his son Ellis Snyder and his family at Columbus and thinks maybe they may be having some extras in celebration of the event—will try it and see what happens. He has been with the local Ashville bank since its beginning in June 1906.

Ashville—Up in the old home township they're usually a peaceful lot but when "stirred up" put on a real fight and one of this sort was staged at the election Tuesday. The contention was about who should be school board members. Wayne Brown, incumbent, won over Page McCray by a one vote margin, 107 to 106. The other candidate for a school board place, was Charles Rager, a present member, received 131 tallies. Another contest was for constable, Emerson Brown and Roy Sprung each receiving four votes. Madison has no Justice of Peace and we may go right up there and be it and if and when we do we'll need both those constables.

Ashville—Harry and Mrs. Abbott, local residents, just returned home from an extended trip to the West.

reaching the coast and visiting the fair at San Francisco.

Mr. Abbott told us that their first stop was with relatives, Dr. O. O. Wolf and family and Gilbert and Mrs. Pouton at Ottawa, Kansas; also Prof. Frank Wolf at Baldwin, Kansas, where Mr. Wolf is connected with Baker University and next with Mrs. May Griffith, her daughter Ruth and the son John, all engaged in teaching. Then to San Francisco Fair. Most interesting thing to us there was the Cavalcade of the Golden West which was a fascinating entertainment. The scenery was grand, especially crossing the lofty Sierra mountains through snow sheds and the snow-capped mountains and historic Donner Lake. In Los Angeles they visited Mrs. Abbott's two brothers, Clay and Frank Griffith and their families. And from here a three-day and two-nights trip by the Sunset route to New Orleans where points of interest were visited including the crossing of the longest railroad bridge in the world which spans the great Mississippi. Said the route home was by Middletown, O., where they visited with their son, H. T. Abbott.

SETTLEMENT LOOMS FOR FIGHT OVER GAS RATE

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9—The 15-year-old gas rate fight between the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., and the city of Columbus will be renewed in January, when city council will reopen negotiations looking toward settlement of the controversy, council spokesmen said today.

Voters Tuesday approved a "stop-gap" 48-cent gas rate which will be appealed by the utility to the state utilities commission. The company has been collecting 56.22 cents, and will continue to do so a 10-pound son was born to Ivan and Mrs. McCarthy.

until the conferees reach some sort of agreement, company officials said.

A new electric rate approved by the voters will go into effect next Wednesday. It will mean a savings of about $300,000 annually to the 79,000 residential consumers of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company.
